1. Project Summary: COTRR is a women-founded, women-led grassroots Non-Government Organization (NGO) registered in Kenya in 2007. The organization supports household activities for resilience building, resource and livelihood enhancement for families of the last mile. Also, COTRR implements scholarship and education support initiatives for 'at risk children' in all COTRR project areas. The program is already supporting over 30 children for secondary and primary school education, as well as 2 students at the university, some of whom were rescued from child marriages. Mentorship sessions are organized to ensure that these children get an all-round development.

The laptops will be used to support students in the education sponsorship program at the university level and for those in secondary schools to discover how computers can contribute to their education journey as follow: -

- Student proceeding to the university will be provided with a laptop. Laptops are now a requirement for students joining the university as lecturers send soft copy notes, use Google class or Google docs among other modern computer-based methods of teaching. On completion, the students will be required to hand over the laptop to another student.
- Computer training: During school holidays, students will be trained by qualified COTRR staff on how to use Computers, the internet and Microsoft office packages. They will also be taught on how to access and download educational material online through the e-book readers.
- Community trainings: A major part of COTRR's work is community trainings for capacity building and resilience. The laptops will also be used for training in the fight against FGM, Child Marriage and promoting girl-child education.
- Students support and education sponsorship coordination – One laptop will be used at the office level to coordinate and manage the students under the education
